

A FEW BAD APPLES

How Is Fraud Being Perpetrated In Your Organisation?

“One bad apple can spoil the barrel!” – a single, rogue employee can create havoc in an organisation that doesn’t have the necessary safeguards in place to prevent, detect and respond to internal threats.

Just one individual’s negative behaviour can have a detrimental effect on a group and, for large organisations, the threat from just “a few bad apples” increases tenfold. With internal fraud figures climbing each year and current economic conditions heightening all three elements of the fraud triangle, organisations need to know where their key threats lie and the effective responses that can be deployed to minimise the threat. A robust compliance framework that’s operating effectively to prevent, detect and respond to internal fraud will help stop rotten apples from tainting the apple cart.

